Friday Was Not Usual

The tragic news of President Kennedy's death affected each individual in a different manner. Following is the reaction of our own Rita Fisher who was working at a telephone switchboard when the event took place.

by Rita Fisher

Friday morning started out as usual. It was the beginning of my three day, 32-hour work week at the Telephone Answering Service. I got my four-year old ready to take to grandma's for the day, saw that all the others were up and moving, set out the lunch money for the three school children on the washing machine and left for work.

The morning work hours at the Telephone Answering Service were the usual thing. We serve as a secretarial service for doctors, lawyers, plumbers, electricians, roofers, realtors and many others who prefer to have their phone answered and messages given and taken while they are away from their office.

I took orders for a trucking company and passed them on to the dispatcher when he called in, I located a doctor at a hospital who had a patient who wanted to talk to him before office hours began, I gave messages to those businessmen who were starting their day. Sometimes the board got busy but now and then it would slow down so that a few words could be said to the two women working beside me. So the morning went and lunch time went and then came the shattering, unbelievable blow.

The First News

We got a call from one of the part-time workers. The woman next to me greeted her and then a look of astonishment came over her face. She had just been told that the President had been shot. We just couldn't believe it. I immediately switched on the little radio at the office, but it was tuned to a small station and there was music. How could there be music if this was true, I thought?

"She's got it on her television set. I can hear it," said the woman next to me. I plugged my set into her board and then I could hear the voice on the other end broadcasting that the president had been shot and was being rushed to the hospital. The tension started to grow. But the work continued.

It's hard to continue working, answering calls, taking messages, when you start to tremble and your stomach gets tied up in knots. That's exactly how I felt. The news started coming through on the small station and we strained our ears, trying to hear the news and trying to work at the board at the same time.

Waiting and Praying

For a while after that, things quieted down. A few calls came in, most of them were from persons who were on the job and still unaware of what had happened. It seemed as if everybody had stopped whatever they were doing and were listening to the tragic news as it unfolded. We waited and listened as the newsmen told of the flight to the hospital. We listened and prayed with the rest of the nation as the minutes went by and it seemed more and more sure that the President of the United States was dead. We reasoned, along with others, that his condition was not good when they did not move him

WMA Bus Schedule

The following changes should be made in the bus schedule printed in last week's News Review:

The southbound bus leaving N.A. S.A. at 5:05 p.m. arrives at Beltway Plaza at 5:26, at Kenilworth at 5:43 and at 11th & Pa. N.W. at 6:08.

The northbound bus leaving 11th & Pa. N.W. at 7:45 a.m. does not make a stop at Beltway Plaza.

The Saturday schedule, which differs considerably from the weekday schedule, is available at city offices.

All schedules are likely to undergo further changes; the WMA information service can be reached at 582-3300.

Center School PTA

The Center School PTA will meet on Tuesday, December 3, at 8 p.m. The Glee Club will offer several selections after a brief business meeting.

from the emergency room as they had done to the Governor of Texas. The appearance of the Priests was another indication.

Again we got a phone call and this time she said that the President was dead. Again we weren't completely convinced because the station we were listening to had not said so. Again we listened by way of our phones to what was coming through on the television set. Then our little radio station confirmed it.

Reactions

In that little office, containing a three-position board, we could feel the reactions of many people. Many firms started closing down. They were too upset to concentrate. The trucking company dispatcher called in for messages and I reported that I had none at that time, stating that I figured things had slowed up. He agreed and said that he felt the same way and said he was leaving for the day too.

Other businesses closed. Doctors cancelled their afternoon and evening hours. Among these was a surgeon and psychiatrist. Most of the people we talked to were shocked at the news. Tragic, terrible and unbelievable were the most frequently used words to describe what had happened.

My little girl called me when she got home from school. She had heard what had happened while she was in school. I told her to turn the television set on and listen to the true facts. It was a moment in history which I am sure nobody will ever forget. I wanted her to remember the truth as it unfolded before her rather than trust to the memory of others. To me it seemed important for my children to understand what was going on.

Personal Involvement

On Sunday occurred the most personal experience of all.

One of the companies using our answering service is a vault works. I never even dreamed of the possibility that the arrangements for the burial of John F. Kennedy would be coming through our office. Of the many instructions we must follow in our service is the one that any orders that come in for vaults on Sunday which have the burial scheduled for Monday have to be transmitted immediately to the owner of the vault works. I was giving him such an order when he said that we should be expecting to get the one for the President. Needless to say, this shook me up. But at least I was prepared when a short time later, the light flashed on the vault owner's line and the man on the other end announced that it was Gawler's Funeral Home calling. I knew what was to come next. I took the order for the vault which would encase and protect the coffin bearing the remains of President John F. Kennedy. And I had enough composure then to immediately call the owner of the vault works and pass the information on to him.

Then a mild case of shock set in. I didn't realize what it was right away. Instead of trembling or feeling all tied up, I felt completely relaxed and weightless. Emotion had been drained from me and I felt as if I had been drugged. It's the tranquility one feels when under sedation preparatory to an operation or childbirth. But I had to continue working because other lights came on, other messages had to be taken, other messages had to be dispatched. Stopped up drains, leaking dishwashers, children with fever, even a call for the County Coroner from a Detective at one of the hospitals because a person had arrived D.O.A.

It wasn't the usual Friday after all.

Sincerest Thanks

To the Editor:

I wish to express my sincerest thanks to all those who sent cards, flowers, gifts and made calls and visits during my recent illness. I wish especially to thank those men who donated blood. Thanks, too, for all your prayers. I can but repeat what I have said at the end of each of my twenty-six years among you: The Greenbelt people are "the salt of the earth".

Gratefully yours,
Cyrilla O'Connor

Halley Wins Engineer Prize

On Wednesday, November 20, former Greenbelter Edward M. Halley, Jr., was awarded the Young Engineer's Prize by the Washington Society of Engineers for his paper on "Pollution Abatement Through Separation of Combined Sewers".

Halley, who moved to Greenbelt in 1937, at the age of 4, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Halley, Sr. of 62-B Crescent Rd. He attended the Center School and was in the first graduating class of Northwestern High.

Request Board On Human Relations

On next Monday's city council agenda is a request by Greenbelt Citizens for Fair Housing that the city council consider the establishment of a Human Relations Advisory Board. In making this recommendation, the Fair Housing Group presented its reasoning.

A) Because Greenbelt is part of a multi-racial community and because it includes within its city limits large Equal Opportunity Employers such as NASA and Klein's, Negro families may want to move here in the near future.

B) City council should provide a means to insure that the transition will be as smooth and as peaceful as possible.

C) Formation of such a board will, in the group's view, demonstrate that council is able to recognize the need for dealing with problems ahead of time.

The Fair Housing Group visualizes the functions of the board, among others, as advising council on inter-group relations, serving as a forum within which representatives of differing opinions could air their views, and serving as a source of information to the community.

Poetry Hour Will Continue

Greenbelt Elementary school children are not going to lose their Poetry Hour after all. After Miss Elizabeth Hage, Director of Prince George's County Memorial Library had informed Mrs. Paris, local Librarian "Reluctantly, we have to make a decision not to hold the Poetry Hour in Greenbelt during the Winter of 1963-1964" a search for a volunteer was rewarded by Mrs. Marjory Donn agreeing to continue the sessions. Mr. Cardano, Principal of Center School, will make the school library room available for this purpose.

Mrs. Donn, who is a former teacher, moved into Greenbelt only one year ago and Greenbelt considers itself fortunate to number her among its citizens. She intends to meet with last year's members of the Poetry Hour on Friday, December 6, at 4 p.m. in the school library of Center School. The first meeting of the Poetry Hour open to new members will be announced later in the News Review.

Retiring Detective is Known For His Meticulous Reports

Karle Tyler Howe, 62, of 9166 Edmonston Road, who will retire from the Metropolitan police force December 1, exits with two claims to policemanly fame. Det. Sgt. Howe, who has been getting a captain's pay all these years, is the sole survivor of four men appointed by the special Act of Congress (the 77th) which had found the local Police Department vaguely deficient in a number of categories.

In accordance with the terms of the legislation, the Civil Service Commission advertised nationally an examination of applicants, and some 950 persons qualified for the test. About 350 actually took it. Sixteen passed it and Karle Tyler Howe, then a police investigator in New England, came out No. 1 on the list.

Howe himself retires next month after 21 years of service here as a valuable adjunct in the Check and Fraud Squad although in his time he has worked in a majority of the local police specialties.

Howe's other claim to fame is the caliber of the reports he writes on his investigations. They are, so to speak, 45-caliber reports in a department whose workaday weapon is the .38. They are meticulously phrased reports accounting for every minute of every hour of every day he spends on the trail of his quarry.

On December 1 about 12:01 a.m. Howe will assume the role of private citizen at the home he shares with his wife, Alyce.

Nursery School Journeys To Rock Creek Nature Center

On Friday, November 22, the Greenbelt Nursery School made a trip to the Rock Creek Nature Center. The Center houses many objects of interest to children of all ages - from its collection of stuffed animals in natural settings to live exhibits of frogs, turtles, fish, and snakes.

In the basement we saw a film giving a general background of the park - its animals and plant life seen in the different seasons.

After the children had viewed all the exhibits inside, we took a walk on the woodland trail.

Catholic University Presents Moliere's "The Miser"

On Friday, November 29th, the Catholic University Theatre will bring to its stage the French comedy classic by Moliere, "The Miser". The presentation will run through December 14.

A master of satirizing human traits and foibles, Moliere in this play exposes with hilarious ridicule an eccentric old penny-pincher who believes that everyone is attempting to rob him. He uses the threat of his money to bribe and thwart young lovers, only to have romance triumph over money in the end.

After Turkey Take a Nap

What's the best thing to do after eating Thanksgiving turkey? Take a nap, says the American Automobile Association.

Roast turkey, dressing and all the trimmings may be the order of the day on Thursday, but they do not induce alert driving afterwards, advises George R. Hammond, Manager of the D. C. Division's Traffic Safety Department. In warning motorists against driving too soon after the heavy Thanksgiving meal, he said that heavy meals very often induce drowsiness and lethargy, and certainly no one should drive in this sub-alert condition.

Cook Turkey Thoroughly Says Md. Health Dept.

Cook your holiday turkey thoroughly, serve it hot and refrigerate it promptly after use, C. S. Brinsfield, Md. State Health Department Food Control Chief, advised today. He recommended that dressing be cooked outside the bird as a precaution against possible food poisoning. If dressing is cooked inside the turkey, heat and cooking time must be increased to assure adequate heat penetration to the center of the dressing.

The following safeguards were suggested by Mr. Brinsfield:

* Clean fresh turkeys thoroughly and wash inside and out; be sure that all internal organs are removed.

* Allow sufficient time for frozen turkeys to thaw under refrigeration; a large bird may require three days, a small bird two days. Wash inside and out.

* Cook turkey on the same day that it is to be served.

* Keep turkey and dressing very hot until ready to eat, and refrigerate both immediately after the meal.

* Refrigerate sliced turkey in small packages so that all slices will be thoroughly chilled.

* Cook large quantities of dressing - for church suppers or other large social gatherings - in shallow pans so that heat is distributed evenly.

When there is any doubt as to whether food has been contaminated, Mr. Brinsfield suggests that it be discarded. Salmonella and Staphylococcus bacteria sometimes are transmitted to humans through undercooked or inadequately refrigerated meat, he said. If there is reason to suspect food poisoning, a physician should be called. Symptoms may include the sudden onset of headache, abdominal pain, nausea and vomiting, diarrhea and fever from four to 48 hours after eating.
